SIXFOLD COLORADO · INTERNAL · THREE OPTIONS, TRUE SIZE

Business cards

Printed at 3.5 × 2 in, actual size, so what you see is what arrives. The dashed line is the 0.125 in safe margin — nothing important crosses it, because trimming moves. Add a further 0.125 in bleed on every edge when you send artwork.

> Roots are on, and they are card-only. The three wavy root strokes need the mark at roughly 0.8 in to survive: at that size the thinnest is 0.67pt, which offset and digital hold on either stock. They are 5–10× under a screen-print floor at any wearable size, which is why the shirt drops them and the card keeps them.

> The opacity problem does not apply here. That was a screen-printing limit. Cards print full-colour digital or offset, which holds the mark's layering exactly as drawn — so cards are not waiting on the one-colour garment mark.

1 Front arrangement — pick one

All on Pine so only the arrangement changes. The banded mono treatment is the one from the hoodie print — a short phrase letterspaced wide, above or below the mark.

1 · BANNER ABOVE — Colorado lowest

2 · BOTH BELOW — CHOSEN

3 · RULED — Colorado set off below a hairline

> ⚑ The descriptor is Lawn, Land & Fire — settled 2026-09-28. Chosen from the ranked candidates in REBRAND-PATH Phase 1: it leads with the promoted service, keeps the one twice declined for dropping, and reads as three equal services rather than fire-with-add-ons. Per that file the descriptor is Brandon's call with Matthew's recommendation, so it wants his yes before anything is ordered.

> Type floor. At 5.2pt with wide letterspacing these bands are near the smallest that prints cleanly on card stock. Do not shrink them further.

2 A · Pine — the house card

A · FRONT

A · BACK

> Matches the site and the sheets. Dark cards show fingerprints and scuff at the edges — worth a matte or soft-touch finish, which costs more.

3 B · Turf — the saturated option

B · FRONT — solid mark, same as the shirt

B · BACK — light, so the details read

> The one people remember. It used to tie the card to the crew shirt; the shirt is ember and is itself on the collateral sweep, so that argument is now the other way round — this card is what the shirt should match, on your crew. Flipping to a light back is deliberate: contact details on orange are the weakest thing on this page to read.

4 C · Bone — the plain one

C · FRONT — same lockup, light ground

C · BACK

> Cheapest to print, hardest to lose in a stack of white cards, and the least like anyone else's. Single-sided is an option here if cost matters.

5 Decisions before these go to a printer

- Service line settled 2026-09-16. “Fire mitigation · land clearing · landscaping” — Matthew’s call, adding the landscaping side. “Defensible space” was dropped rather than added to: it restates fire mitigation, and a fourth item would have crossed the safe margin at this size.
- Email addresses do not exist yet. These use `Contact@SixfoldColorado.com`, which is real. Per-person addresses swap in once Workspace is set up — the layout does not change.
- Names and titles are placeholders. One design, one artwork, name and title swapped per person. Decide who actually needs cards: everyone, or the people who meet customers.
- No mobile number on these. One office line is on the card. If people want their own number it is a second line on the back and the layout holds.
- Nothing claims licensed, insured, bonded or certified — deliberately, per the standing constraint. Do not let a printer’s template add a badge.

Nothing here goes to print until the site is hosted — the URL is on every option and a card outlives a dead link. Artwork needs 0.125 in bleed added on all four edges.
